Saudis hope Iran will stop wrongdoing

Don't push too far, warns Fahd

By Ahmed Al Jarallah

KING Fahd of Saudi Arabia has warned Iran not to push him too far, and threatened to use CSS-2 missiles purchased from China to defend his country if necessary.

In an ioterview with the daily Al Seyassah he also said Kuwait had set ao example in tackling the Kuwaiti airliner hijack ordeal, and proved that terrorism could oot be successful under any circumstaoces.

King Fahd accused the Iranians of seeking to occupy the Holy Kaaba in Makkah, duriog the anoual Muslim pilgrimage, or haj, last year.

Fahd said that the inter-mediate-raoge CSS-2 missiles. "designed to shore up Saudi defence capabilities, will be used if our country is exposed to any

"We hope that we will oot be forced to use this defensive capability because we know that the region's people want to live in peace and security. But if we are obliged, we will have no alternative," he said.

"Our spirit of tolerance should not motivate the Iranians to believe that we are weak.

"We hope Iran will stop its wrongdoing because we do not want it to test the ability of our people in defending themselves," Fahd said.

The interview was taken before Saudi Arabia severed diplomatic ties with Iran last

The Saudis said their decisioo to break relations with Tehran also stemmed from the storming of the Saudi Embassy in Tehran aod the death of a Saudi diplomat following the Makkah riots as well as Iranian attacks oo neutral ships in the Gulf.

Tension heightened in recent weeks when a eeiling was put to the number of pilgrims this year, citing recovation work at the holy sites.

They asked the Iranians to send 50,000 pilgrims instead of the 150,000 who performed haj last year. The Iranians have Fahd said the decision to limit the number of pilgrims this year was not a Saudi one but taken by Islamic countries and acclaimed Islamic organisations.

He pointed out that Iran stood at odds with 45 Islamic countries showed understanding to in the holy lands."

Saudi Arabia, the monarch said, had told Iran that Makkah cannot accommodate the iocreasing oumber of pilgrims, and requested three years to make necessary preparations.

"We told the Iranians to give us time to make the necessary preparations to accommodate more pilgrims.

But the Iranians wanted to flout haj regulations to the disapproval of all Islamic states."

Fahd said the Iranians also 'ignored haj rules last year aod wanted to occupy the Kaaba, but were repulsed oot only by Saudi security meo but by pilgrims." He ooted other Iranian viola-

Fahd said he longed to see the Palestinian uprising (in Israelioccupied territories) bear fruit when the Palestinian people are granted their right to live on their soil aod in their homelaod.

On the recent hijacking of the Kuwait Airways, Fahd said the air pirates must be brought to justice, and urged all peace-loving countries to help Kuwait punish the air pirates. He added, he was deeply disturbed by the atrocities committed by the hijackers against the hostages on board the plane.

The Saudi leader called for effective international measures to comhat terrorism, including ecocomic and other sanctions against countries that sponsor

Armenian killed in Athens

ATHENS, April 29, (UPI): Police announced today that a man carrying a South Yemen diplomatic passport who was assassinated outside his home in an Athens suburb was Agop Agopian, 39, leader of the Armenian secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia, or Asala.

Asala is fighting a terrorist war against Turkey, which it blames for the extermination of 1.5 millioo Armenians during World War I. Asala is also demanding the liberation of Armenian territories under Turkisb rule.

It has claimed responsibility for more than 50 terrorist attacks against Turkisb interests in various parts of the world, including the assassination of 13 Turkish diplomats between 1975 and 1983.

Agopian, who was shot yesterday hy two gummen using sawed-off shotguos, was ideotified initially by police as a South Yemeo diplomat.

Agopian was killed by two masked gunmen at 4:45 am outside his home. He carried a South Yemeni diplomatie passport which identified him as Mohammad Abu Kashim, 50.

Police said that Agopian who was married and the father of two childreo have lived in Athens for almost ooe year, made frequent trips abroad and was passing as a businessman.

Police said they established Agopian's identity through his Yugoslav wife Jianil Toutoujian. Political crisis ends in Sudan

Mahdi re-elected

KHARTOUM, April 29, (UPI): The National Assembly re-elected Prime Minister Sadio Al Mahdi to office in a move apparently signalling the beginning of the end of nine months of political crisis in Sudan. Sadiq attracted 196 out of 222 votes cast in the election late Wednesday whieb was carried live on state-run television. About 40 assembly members were absent. Twenty six votes went to two other minority candidates — a southerner and a communist.

Most significantly, the fun-damentalist National Islamie Front oppositioo group cast its block vote for Sadiq and may oow joio a new Sadiq-led governmeot coalition, along with the hlack African southerners and the maiostream Muslim Democratic Unionist Party

The previous coalitioo between the southern parties, the DUP and Sadiq's majority Umma Party collapsed last August in a power-sharing wrangle precipitating Sudan's worst political crisis since dietator Jaafar Nimeiri was ousted in a coup April 4, 1985.

Two factors have prevented the quick formation of another government - the iotransigence of the southerners of the thoroy questioo of peace in the 5-yearold civil war in the South and the hardline stance of the fundamentalists on the aboliooo of the Islamie law code introduced hy

Don't count on easy victory, rebels told

Soviet advisers to stay: Najib

KABUL, April 29; (Reuter): President Najibullah of Afghan-istan warned anti-government rebels on Thursday not to count on an easy victory after Soviet soldiers go home.

At a news conference in the Afghan capital, he said: "Nobody has taken Kabul in the past and oo body will take it in the future. You should not have any doubt in that regard."

Referring to the period after Soviet troops withdraw, be said some leaders of the Pakistanbased rebel alliance believed they could move into a power vacuum.

"They count on victory following the return of the Soviet troops. They think soon they will be coming to Kabul riding on white horses.

Advisers

And with a rare smile, Najibullah quoted an old Afghan proverh: "We regard this as the distribution of an unhunted bear skin."

The heavy-set former secret police chief, easily turning aside awkward questions and appearing confident of his own power, was asked whether his country would continue to rely on Soviet

Soviet military advisers had been in Afghanistan even before the 1978 revolution and would be needed in the future, "taking into consideration the complexity of modern technology," he said.

"Not only Soviet, but also advisers from other friendly countries and even capitalist countries can help in the social, economie cultural and even military spheres," Najibullah added.

Questioned about future shipments of armaments from the Soviet Union, he replied, "at the moment our forces have enough arms supplies hut if needed, like any other state, on the basis of international law and convention, Afghanistan will take measures to consolidate its armed forces.'

Clarifying his offer earlier this week to create a line of demilitarised zones along the Pakistani border to facilitate the return of refugees, Najihullah said his government would still control these areas.

The creation of non-militarised zones does not mean that the armed forces of Afghaoistan cannot safeguard these regions."
He denied that the departing

Soviet troops would leave their arms behind for the Afghan forces. "No, it is not correct and if you come on May 15 (when the Soviet withdrawal is due to begin) you will witness the

But he added that the Soviet Union had built some military 'establishments" — which be did not detail - and these would be left behind.

The Afgban president repeated his offer of negotiations with any opposition group in any place, saying all Afghans were welcome to "engage in all forms of political struggle excluding armed struggle."
But the limits of his tolerance were reached when he was asked whether he would allow forces opposed to the revolution to take control of the country.

"We shall not allow such a thing," Najibullah said. Meanwhile, Pakistan opposition leader Benazir Bhutto says the Soviet pullout from Afghan-istan could trigger new regional turmoil leading to "another Lebanon.' Benazir also told a news conference in Washington she was concerned that unspecified nations might be considering a pre-emptive strike against Pakistan's nuclear programme, which is widely believed to be developing nuclear weapons. In Afghanistan, the United States and other influential nations should encourage formation of a broad-based government that could work against factional disputes that could overwhelm the country following the troop withdrawal, she

"It is a major triumph that the Soviet troops are withdrawing" hut there is great danger "of Afghanistan becoming another Lebanon with different factions holding sway in different parts," the head of the Pakistan Peoples Party said.

14 killed as Sikhs attack villages

AMRITSAR, April 29. (UPI): Sikh militants killed 14 people in attacks in northern Punjab state and opened fire on a bus, injuring five passengers, police said today.

Police said about 10 Sikh gunmen on two tractors, last night roared through two villages, killing nine people. The villages are located on the outskirts of the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, 400 km northwest of New Delhi.

Police said members of Bhindranwale Tiger Force, a Sikh fundamentalist group, last night drove into Mahmood Pura village, where they shot and killed two residents. The attackers shot and killed another two people on their way to nearhy Rampura village, where they gunned down another five people, including a woman.

Police said four people died at the scene and the woman died in a hospital.

The attackers encountered no opposition during their attacks on two villages, police said.

They said Khalistan Commando Force, another Sikh extremists group killed another five people early today in two attacks in the Jhabal area of Amritsar district.

Firing

In yet another violent incident near the state capital of Chan-digarh, about five Sikh gunmeo in a car, opened fire at a crowded bus, police said.

They said the gunmen drove their vehicle parallel to the bus and signalled the bus driver to stop, when the driver accelerated the gummen chased the hus and opened fire, injuring five people.

Hijackers left Algeria without achieving anything

WASHINGTON, April 29, (AP): The hijackers of a Kuwaiti ietliner left Algeria without getting what they wanted and no concessions were made to obtain tbe bostages' release, tbe Algerian ambassador said yes-

Ambassador Mohammed Sahnoun also said that while his government would bave liked to apprehend the hijackers, such a move would bave damaged its credibility as a mediator io international crises, such as attempts to obtain the release of American bostages in Lehaoon.

Indicated The United States has been pressing Algeria for information on the deal it worked out last week for the release of the 31 hostages held hy extremists on a Kuwait Airways jumbo jetliner in Algiers. US officials said they do not have clear indications that the hijackers left Algeria, despite reports that the pro-Iranian sky pirates were flown last Wednesday from Algiers to Syria and then made their way to Lebanon.

Sahnoun, addressing reporters at the National Press Club. indicated that the hijackers bad left his country. "They went back without achieving an thing," he

He declined to divulge details, saying that to do so would break Algeria's word to the hijackers and damage its 25-year-old role as a mediator in dozens of dis-

"We have a skill that we put at the disposal of the international community," he said.

"This is not always under-stood," he added, in apparent reference to demaods by the United States and other countries that Algeria help capture the hijackers and hring them to trial.

"We delivered what we could deliver," namely the hostages' release, he said.

"There was a price to pay. We are not entirely satisfied," Sahnoun said. "But this was a minimum price compared with what they wanted."

The hijckers had demanded the release of 17 coovicted terrorists jailed in Kuwait -- a demand which was not met, be added.

There bave been reports that Kuwait cancelled the death sentence against three of the 17. But Sahnoun insisted that "no concessions were made.

Algeria has been asked to help in efforts to obtain the release of some 20 hostages, among them eight Americans, believed held hy pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon, he said.

Io additioo, Algeria had in the past supplied information it obtained about the hostages to their families, Sahnoun said.

THE director of the capital's labour department, Abdul Aziz Al Kulaib, said oo Thursday that 376,187 expatriate workers were in the service of 27,925 employers. He said there were 226,902 labourers io the capital governorate and the rest in the other governorates.

He denied there was any restriction in issuing work permits to any Arab or foreign nationals, and this was evident from the monthly statistics issued by the Social Affairs and Labour Ministry and published by all newspapers. He said the reason there were larger oumbers of Asians was mainly because they were skilful and accepted lower wages. He pointed out that the nationality of the workers was determined by the employers.

Abdul Razzak to attend WHO conference

GENEVA, April 29, (Kuna): Kuwait Health Minister, Dr Abdul Razzak Yousef Al Abdul Razzak is due to arrive in Switzerland this weekend to attend the annual conference of the World Health Organisation:

The minister is expected to be accompanied by a four-man team including his deputy Dr Ali

Health ministers from at least 100 countries are expected in Geneva for the cooference, which starts on May 2.

In all some 1,200 delegates from 166 countries are due to participate. Before the start of the conference, on Monday morning, the Kuwait Health Minister is due to take part in a meeting of the council of Arab health ministers, to review strategy for the WHO assembly and to discuss regional health questions.

Israelis concerned over PLO-Syria ties

By Masha Hamilton

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM. (AP): The first steps towards a rapprochement hetween the PLO and Syria reflect a Syrian desire for more influence in Israeli-occupied territories and a need by Yasser Arafat for Syrian help in Lehanon, according to Israeli analysts.

The analysts say that if a rapprochement comes about, it could further complicate USbacked peace efforts in the Middle East and lead to intensified Arab rioting in the occupied territories.

The two leaders discussed in Damascus on Monday the US peace plan and the nearly fivemonth Arah uprising in the West Bank and Gaza, according to Syrian and Palestinian sources.

It was Arafat's first visit to the Syrian capital since Assad expelled him on June 24, 1984, amid a Syrian-hacked PLO mutiny against Arafat's leadership. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Israel's response to the meeting would be to heighten its alert along its horders and in the West Bank and Gaza, where Palestinians bave staged their most violent protests in 21 years of Israeli occupation.

Commandos have tried | 1 times to infiltrate Israel from Lebanon in five months. In an attempt Tuesday, two Israeli soldiers and three guerrillas were killed.

Dan Meridor, a member of the Israeli parliament who is very close to Shamir, said in a TV broadcast that "I know the Lebanese area is an area from which the PLO would like to operate and would, of course, want Syrian assistance. I hope Assad will not make such a mistake. I assume we would not see it in a favourable light."

Arafat may also want to improve his relations with Syria because his pragmatic wing of the Palestine Liberation Organisation was weakened by April 16 assassination of his deputy Khalil Al Wazir, military analyst Zeev Schiff told the Associated Press.

Al Wazir, also known as Ahu Jihad, was buried in Damascus. He was popular with both Arafat loyalists and pro-Syrian dissidents. Israeli sources have said Israel carried out the killing, but government officials have declined tinian factions all vowed

"The Abu Jihad killing hurt Arafat's supporters and may have been an impetus for this meeting. Arafat wants to appear more radical," said Schiff, a correspondent for the daily Haaretz. "This meeting shows the PLO leaders are like a pendulum, moving from one position to another."

Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin noted that either Syria or the PLO would have to compromise to achieve an alliance. and he warned that Assad would not be the one to moderate his position.

Instead, Rahin predicted on Israel television, "the Syrians will demand from him (Arafat) extreme positions that will pull him away from Jordan, from

Isolated

Yossi Olmert, a Middle East specialist with Tel Aviv University, said Jordan's King Hussein was likely to be isolated by a PLO-Syrian alliance because he was more moderate than Assad and willing to discuss a resolution to the Middle East conflict.

Olmert said the meeting was also bad for the United States, which has spent the last several months promoting a peace plan for the Middle East. Both Israeli and Arah officials already have criticised the Shultz

"The PLO and Syrian share interests on several issues. They both want to keep pressure on Israel from the territories and from Lebanon, Olmert told the Nevertheless, Olmert and others predicted the Arafat-Assad meeting would bave an impact in the occupied territories.

'The 'sulha in Damascus' will fuel further unrest in the territories," predicted corre-spondent Uzi Machnaimi in the daily Yediot Ahronot, using the Arabic word for a meeting of

For their part, Palestinians in occupied territories applauded the reported reconciliation.

"The PLO-Syrian reconciliation will double the power of the uprising," said Bassam Shakaa, deposed mayor of the West Bank's largest city, Nahlus. "With this meeting between Arafat and Assad, the fighting spirit of the Palestinians will

Afghan accord paves way for rapprochement

By Patrick Werr

BAHRAIN, (Reuter): The Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan is expected to set the stage for a resumption of formal relations between Moscow and staunchly anti-communist Saudi Arabia after a 50-year break, diplomats and political analysts

They said that by putting an amhassador in the kingdom, long a bastion of American influence, the Soviet Union would score a major coup that might be quickly followed in Bahrain and Qatar, the only two other Arah countries that still have no ties with Moscow.

"The Saudis have made Afghanistan a condition for so long it would be hard for them to back down now," said one diplomat. According to an agreement signed in Geneva on April 15, the Soviet Union on May 15 will begin a nine-month withdrawal from Afghanistan of an estimated 115,000 troops, ending radical leftist movements than a In 1927, the Soviet Union was decade or two ago. Diplomats said a Soviet flag in the first country to recognise the new Satidi kingdom hut there Rivadh's new diplomatic quarter would make the Americans stand up and take notice of one of their major allies that feels it is ignored.

Relations between Riyadh and Washington have increasingly been strained by Congress's humiliating refusal to approve weapon sales to the kingdom and by US support for Israel.

Turned away by their traditional arms supplier, the Saudis have turned more and more to other countries for their defence needs.

One recent country to fill thevoid was China, which sold the Saudis medium range missiles. When the Americans protested, the Saudis made it clear the US ambassador was no longer welcome in Riyadh, diplomaticsources said.

The ambassador returned to Washington and a new one was Diplomats say Moscow stands to gain from the Saudi disen-chantment with the United States. They want the Saudis to persuade the Afghan guerrillas to allow a smooth withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Moscow would like port facilities for its Gulf fleet, and the respectability conferred by having relations with Saudi Arabia might convince a country like the United Arab Emirates to accept Soviet ships, diplomats say.

The Saudi-Soviet courtship began in 1983 when Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al Faisal visited Moscow as part of an Arah League delegation. It has included, since the beginning of this year, the sale to the Soviet Union of 170,000 tonnes of wheat. The wheat was part of a mountain of grain built up by massive Saudi farm subsidies.

Last year Prince Saud returned to Moscow as a representative of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) and in February Vladimar

Polyakov, director of the Foreign Ministry's Middle East desk, became the highest ranking Soviet official to visit the kingdom since 1938.

But in spite of the high-level courtship, the Saudis are likely to wait until the troop withdrawal is certain before exchanging diplomats.

Other Saudi reservations include the apparent unwillingness of the Kremlin to go along with an arms embargo against Iran. But the prospect of relations with Saudi Arabia might make the pill of antagonising the Iranians with an embargo easier for Moscow to swallow.

Katz, who recently visited the kingdom, said that in the past, the Saudis have had other conditions. These included a Soviet withdrawal from Sonth Yemen and Ethiopia and more freedom for Soviet Muslims to make the annual pilgrimage to Makkah. But he said they were unlikely to press these too hard.

In recent years only some two dozen officials have been allowed hy the Kremlin to make the annual pilgrimage, Katz said. China also courting the Saudis has allowed 3,000 to 4,000 Muslim pilgrims to travel to the kingdom every year.

Some diplomats think that in order to show even-handedness the Saudis might open ties simul. taneously with communist China. The Chinese, with fewer political ambitions in the Middle East, present less of a threat than does the Soviet Union; they sav.

Uprising prompts war of ads in

By Neil MacFarguhar

NEW YORK, (AP): On the West Bank and Gaza Strip, rocks and hullets are the projectiles of choice in the battle between Israelis and Palestinians. In America, the battle is waged with newspaper advertisements.
"Sometimes the only way to get what you want said into the newspaper is to pay for it," said Ruth Popkin, president of Hadassah, the Jewish women's group that placed an ad calling for a dialogue between women in the Mideast.

There are ads that call for an end to "all aid to apartheid Israel." There are ads that say, "We stand with (Israelis) in your bour of trial, are confident in your essential decency and com-mitment to democratic values."

Readers of the New York Times and the Washington Post have grown accustomed to such ads through the years; the Christian Science Monitor, the Wall Street Journal, the Boston Globe, the Nation, Harper's and the New York Review of Books also are favoured media for

But the volume of such ads is increasing and spreading to smaller newspapers like the Santa Barhara (California) News-Press.

'There's been an increase in the number of opinion ads related to the Middle East from a variety of sources with a variety of different positions," said William Adler, a spokesman for the New York Times Co.

Robert Rawls, responsible for advocacy advertising at the Post. says the paper considers it an important source of revenue.

We particularly carry a lot of advertising on anything concerning Israel or the Middle East because those different groups have money to spend," he said.

Free speech is not cheap. A full-page ad in the New York Times costs as much as $40,000 dollar: a similar ad in the Washington Post can cost $30,000. Though Arah-Americans have purchased some ads, most bave been initiated hy Jews. The munity on Israel's policies in the occupied territories. In March, Daniel Benson and four other New York City professionals organised the ad hoe committee for Middle East conflicts within the Jewish com-policy options. Benson said the five put up $36,000 for the first of a series of ads in the Times because they wanted visiting Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to know that some American Jews support his position.

Pressure

They joined "the war of the ads", as he called it, to decrease the pressure on Israel to "trade territory for so-called peace."

"We see the riots as just another phase in the campaign against Israel, in the war against Israel," said Benson.

In contrast, Mark Bruzonsky, an attorney who used to work for the American Jewish Congress, arranged an ad that advocates reducing both US aid to Israel and military and intelligence cooperation.

"We as American Jews don't want to be associated with what Israel is doing," said Bruzonsky.
"It's both embarrassing and sbameful that the United States continues to support these policies, which are abborrent."

"It is no secret that the Jewisb lobhy is extremely powerful, members of Congress are afraid of speaking out," Bruzonsky said. "That made it more important that American Jews like ourselves have the courage to speak

kun magazine and an organiser of an ad campaign calling for an end to the military occupation, said courage is necessary. He says he has received death threats in the mail due to the ads.

But Jack Mondlak says his Fifth Avenue apartment has been inundated with mail supporting his full-page ads in the Times calling upon Israel to maintain control over the

"It is not true that some people say that the American Jewish community is divided over Israel; 99 per cent are steadfast behind Israel," he said. He has spent $300,000 of his publishing fortune on ads in dozens of papers.

Faris Bouhafa, spokesman for the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, said his organisation prefers to post handbills in the subway. But the committee is a member of the Council of Presidents of Arab-American Organisations, which has advertised.

Jewish ads outnumber Arab ads by a two-to-one margin because "the organised Jewish community, especially in New York, feels very defensive about the way that Israel is perceived right now. They're trying to offset that negative image with paid advertising," he said.

Chinese officials and Western diplomats say the enterprise reforms are vital to curhing the chronic waste and inefficiency fostered by China's central plan-ning system. 'Invigorating' enterprises is the aim of Peking's economic programme for 1988.

Peking plans to finish implementing the enterprise reforms throughout the nation in three to five years, Chinese conservatives for four years, is aimed at improving enterprise management by shifting administrative power from politically motivated party cadres to skilled ise leased in China since the 1949 revolution. During his first three years as leasee, Ling personally earned 90,000 yuan ($24,258), or 30 per cent of the firm's after-tax profits. An income of 10,000 yuan ($2,695) defines a "millionaire" in China. The average annual per capital income for urban residents was 916 yuan ($246) last year.

Today, however Ling risks losing his fortune as quickly as be acquired it. After reaping the initial gains of a new worker incentive scheme, the little pump factory last year went into the "Market conditions changed, we lacked ideological preparation ... and we didn't work hard enough," Ling explained sbeepishly. Ling must make a helty profit of 360,000 yuan ($97,035) this year to cover government taxes and the rent charged by the factory's parent company. If he fails, he'll have to dig into his personal savings account.

More than a fifth of Shenyang's 9,500 enterprises have adopted the leasing system. Some have fallen deeply intodebt, but many have prospered.

Another kind of enterprise reform promoted in Shenyang is contracting, which is practised in 15 per cent of the city's factories.

Unlike the more risky leasing, which is limited to small plants, contracting is permitted for large- and medium-sized firms. Contracts require that managers and workers meet targets for profits, output, and other economic measures or face stiff wage and bonus cuts. The basic problem of reform is a lack of cothusiasm. The solu-tion is competition," said Li Zhengzhi, director of Shenyang's electrotechnical machinery works. Li is on contract. Flourished Shenyang's industry has flourished since the enterprise reforms gained momentum in 1984. The city's gross industrial output and profits have roughly doubled.

greatly boosting workers' wages. But the reforms also have costs for the city's 5.3 million people. They widen income gaps and create a potential for social dislocation unknown in the days of Mao's "iron rice bowl." Factories that can't beat the competition are now frequently auctioned or merged with others. Bankruptcy is also a threat.

Workers went on a rampage at one factory after officials gave them a bankruptcy warning. They plundered chairs and workhenches for firewood and demanded free meals from the factory cafeteria. Beyond these immediate concerns, Chinese officials say enterprise reforms face long-term social and economic obstacles. Chinese firms are burdened by beavy social-welfare obligations that stymic efficiency. Factories must provide workers with a myriad of basic necessities — from housing to haircuts. And 20 million of these workers are that ground alone. Another problem is Peking's failure, for political reasons, to adequately relax state controls on the nations's rigid pricing system. Unless prices for goods and raw materials reflect true market values, enterprises cannot respond rationally to market demands. Yet price reform is extremely unpopular. Last year, inflation caused average real wages for urban workers to stagnate. As Shenyang and other Chinese cities advance in reform, they PARIS, (Reuter): Francois Mitterrand won the first round of the presidential election on Sunday after keeping France guessing for months whether he would seek a second mandate at the age of 71.

Critics denounced the Socialist leader as "the prince of ambiguity" for refusing to reveal his intentions. But while his rightist challengers fought out internal squab-bles, Mitterrand huilt up a war ing hattle against his chief challenger, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac. Mitterrand says he returned to the campaign trail to save France from what he calls the rapacious chest of popularity for the com-

"hands and factions" of the right.
His adversaries see another reason: the desire of an obstinate old man to wreak revenge on Chirac, who forced him into a humiliating power-sharing exercise two years ago. Mitterrand, who in 1981 entered the history books as the first Socialist elected president of France under the Fifth Republic, suffered two setbacks during his seven-year term.

Austerity Setting out with a radical left programme of nationalisations and job-creation, Mitterrand was forced in 1983 to change tack and follow an austerity policy after several franc crises. In March 1986, his Socialist party lost a general election to Chirac's centre-right coalition, which took control of parliament. The defeat forced Mitterrand to name Chirac as his prime minister while he retreated to pockets of power in defence and foreign affairs.

But he sprang back in a new role as arbiter above the fray of everyday politics. His nickname of "Tonton" — uncle in baby talk -- summed up his new role. "Mitterrand died in 1986, hut

Many new films in the pipeline Business is booming in filmland

By Firoze Rangoonwalla

BUSINESS is hooming in filmland. Many new films were launched recently with a bang, and the shooting for many others is going on in full swing. This week we will concentrate on these films, to give readers an idea of what's cooking in the studios covered with stardust.

Jeetendra, Rekha, Rishi Kapoor and Mandakini head the cast of R.A. Films Sheshnaag. The film was launched at a specially erected set at Chandivali Studios. A huge cut-out of the film's logo was carved at the entrance of the studio and the Sheshnaag flags adorned the venue. Jeetendra and Rishi Kapoor broke the auspicious coconul jointly, music director Laxmikant sounded the clapper board and Mandakini switched on the camera, while Rekha, Anupam Kber and Sharat Saxena featured in the muhurat shot. The dialogue rendered by the artistes were:

Anupam Kher: "Jis din 1era baap marega, main ghar main ghee ke diye jalaoonga, sare mohalle mein laddu batwaoonga. Saari daulat par naag ka phan mare baitha hai. Saala marta hi nahin."

Rekha: "Mere pita ko lambi umar dena, hey sheshnaag. "The film is produced by Nalini Sbankar and directed by K.R.

With the conclusion of a long shooting stint Billoo Badshah is 80 per cent complete. Parlicipants in the schedule included Shatrughan Sinha, Kadar Khan, Gulshao Grover, Goga Kapoor, Mac Mohan and junior artistes. Billoo Badshah also stars Anita Raj, Govinda, Neelam, Sumeet Saigal, Archana Joglekar, and Jagdeep (in a special appearance). The film is directed by Sisir Mishra. A whole middle-class area was created inside Filmalaya Studio, including the joint family house of Sbatru, who plies a rickshaw. The fly in the olotment is a rich city girl who enters the family as a daughter-in-law. Jeetendra, Raj Bahhar and Kimi Katkar head the cast of Antien Yodh. The film co-stars. Shakti Kapoor and Amjad Khan. Two top heroines are yet to be finalised. The producer is Jancesh Dayal and the director, Ashok Tyagi. Antim Yudh will be shot in India, Nepal and USA. A special attraction is the Canadian beauty Karen Baldn who is cast as the secood heroine. She woo the title of

It is one of the higgest multi-stars on the sets now multi-starrers on the sets now.

Another hig multi-star film which has had many teething troubles and star tantrums is Batwara. Luckily the the Dharam-Vinod fight did oot get the film stranded. It has made a lot of progress on the desert locations of Rajasthan. Producer Salim and director J.P. Dutta are doing their best to make it the talk of the town or rather the whole country. They work from morning to midnight in two shifts with stars like Dharmendra, Vinod Khanna, Dimple, Poonam, Amrila, Asha Parek and Amrish Puri. An added attraction is the Pakistani cricketer Mohsin Khan. The climax with 350 unit members was shot around Jaipur, in deserts and ancient palaces.

A Rekha starrer to start was Azaad Desh Ke Gbulam directed by S.A. Chandrasekbar. Guest producer Salim switched on the camera and composer Laxmikani broke the coconul. Rekha faced the camera near the idol of a goddess. Her hero is Jackie Shroff. The story is written by the director's wife. Another film made by the same bauner Biwi Ho To Aisi is almost complete. Shakti Kapoor has made waves by saying that he does rape scenes like a duty. He even discusses all the details with the actress so that the timing can be correct. But it is all a stunt. People now say that Shakti's fiasco about Tine Ghai slapping him was also a publicity stunt. The variety programme held at Faridabad had many artistes. Asbah Sachdev played a prank letting Shakti go for Tina who was dancing in a vulgar dress. The two aiready had some romantic exchanges hut Tina did not want it publicly exposed. Clapton at the crossroads

By John Swenson

NEW YORK: Twenty-five years ago, Eric Clapton began one of the most fabled careers in rock 'n' roll history.

Clapton's quarter century of echievements is chronieled on 'Crossroads,' a six-LP, four-CD, historical overview.

The 73-track retrospective is a five-hour trip through every facet of Clapton's music, from his first studio sessions with the Yardhirds in 1963, through his work with John Mayall's Bluesbreakers, Cream, Blind Faith, Delaney and Bonnie, Derek and the Dominos and his own solo albums. The project is the brainchild of producer Bill Levenson, who spent the better part of two years assembling the material from a variety of sources, wealth of previously unreleased recordings.

"It wasn't originally conceived as a boxed set," said Levenson from the studio where he was preparing a retrospective of R-and-B great

Don Covay.
"The thought was to do it like the Hank Williams collection, as a series of double alhums," he said. "I put together a chart of his records on his own, in bands, and as a featured or e session musician, and it looked like eight double albums worth of material. So I decided to keep it to the records made hy working bands that he was part of." Even then the decision-making process was gruelling.

We kept making slight ehanges as we went along," said Levenson. "We knew we had a format problem because we only wanted four CDs, so we knew we had five hours to work

"Chair will decided it was going to be a boxed set we were 80 per cent there on the first draft. When I heard 'Further On Up The Road' I knew we had to use it. We would have liked to include 'It's In The Way That You Use It but there some controctual problems."

Some of the advance stories on the project refer to Crossroads as best-of collection, hut Levenson explained that historical considerations were paramount.

"For quite a while we didn't have Cocaine on the album, he pointed out, "but people kept insisting that it was too important a track to leave off, so we included it."
"I wanted to do this chronologically. Clapton has evolved as a guitarist over the years, and he's evolved as a songwriter, and as he grew older his voice got better, so it had to be chron-

'You can see the change of culture at the same time, the experimentation of the Yardbirds and Cream in the '60s, the reggae and blue roots exploration, the period of slicker performances. You can hear the evolution of the last 25 years of rock in a microcosm.

Working from a historical perspective made for some unusual selections." There's a couple of eye openers," said Levenson. "For instance, starting the Cream period with 'Wrapping Paper,' a song that probably wouldn't be included on a hits compilation. It was the only bridge between what Clapton was doing with Mayall and 'I Feel Free,' though

'Also, you can't get from Blind Faith to Derek and the Dominos unless you can stop off with Delaney and Bonnie, and 'Coming Home' tied that whole side together. People were able to understand how he went from 'Presence of the Lord' to 'Tell The Truth.' That was a nice area to develop. Clapton fans will marvel at the wealth of unreleased material on the set, particularly from the Derek and the Dominos sessions. This is where the project's historical focus is especially noteworthy, since much of it was never intended for release. Most of the unreleased material was from sessions originally produced by Tom Dowd. "On one or two albums we did record two or three more songs that we opted not to use," said Dowd, "because they didn't fit the colour or feel of the album.

Eric Clapton: a quarter century of achievements

"There are other things where there were occasional jams or rehearsals that we put a pilot vocal on to work with to prepare the song. They were never intended to be used. They were homework.

"I had the opportunity to work with John Coltrane on 'My Favourite Things' and 'Giant Steps' Normally se bas' two or three alternate takes.

ay something that ha us climbing the walls with delight it was so great, but he'd say 'I can get it a little better.'
"So you would defer to what he wanted but you knew we had an insurance take in the can. This is a different species, a rehearsal tape. A couple of years ago aliernate cuts from 'Layla' were reissued. I had marked them 'no good, throw away' in my own hand."

Clapton himself had very little input on the project, although Levenson said he gave his approval after listening to it. Ironically, Clapton's request for the inclusion of his re-recorded version of 'After Midnight', currently being used a beer commercial soundtrack. has provoked the only negative critical reaction to the set thus defense of a hand that separates the expert from the rank-and-file player, it is the speed with which the non expert grabs his tricks. This was highlighted by the above hand from the Bermuda Regional, held annually at the end of January at the Southampton Princess.

"It really was something Eric wanted us to use." explained Levenson. "We were going to devote all of side 12 to the Warner Brothers stuff, but when he asked us to include that we had to back everything up.

This hand cropped up in the Open Pairs event. Because of matchpoint considerations in duplicate events, several pairs chose the higher-scoring no trump slam in preference to 36 Biblical poems: the minor-suit one. At the table we watched, East took advantage of the vulnerability for a three heart preempt, and South overcalled with three no trump. Since North expect-tricks, he bounced right into the no trump slam. A diamond lead was more likely to give a trick away than to help hisside's cause, so West opted to lead the jack of hearts. The fate of the contract hinged on East's play to the very first trick. Those who feared they would lose the ace of hearts unless they flew up with it at the first trick, lived to regret it. Declarer then had no trouble scoring two spade tricks, two hearts, two diamonds and six clubs. Observe the difference if East allows the jack of hearts to run to South's queen. Declarer has only 11 tricks, and his only chance for a 12th is the diamond finesse. When it fails, he goes down a trick.

Those players who were not so greedy and settled in the club slam had no problem. Declarer simply led a heart toward dummy. If East ducked, his side got no heart trick and declarer lost only one spade trick; if he rose with the ace, declarer could take two spade discards on the K-Q of hearts, to avoid losing a spade trick. . .

Parents, manager fight over Tiffany

Spirit of ingenuity distinguishes Holland

JUST one glance at the map is enough for anyone to see that Holland is first and foremost a maritime trading nation — situated on the North Sea, at the mouth of Europe's most important waterway, the Rhine. That is why the country has for centuries been the meeting place of Europe.

The Netherlands is small. But has continually expanded and, hit-hy-hit, has heen reclaiming land from the sea. lts windmills, dykes, dams and ocks are living witnesses to land reclamation.

That is why the west of the country, behind the wide beaches and dunes, is as flat as the seabed itself. See the fascinating transformation of the landscape for yourself and you will understand why so many Dutchmen have become painters

History

The capital, Amsterdam, became a great city during the 17th century. Seafarers and merchants ensured that the whole world knew the Dutch flag. This spirit of enterprise in Amsterdam brought the country unprecedented prosperity. A wealth that lives on through the unique architecture of the 17th century canal houses.

Wander around Amsterdam and witness what is perhaps the most vivid history that any city could hope for. The Netherlands is a monarchy. The present sovereign, Queen Beatrix of Orange, receives the same respect from her subjects as that for her 16th century ancestor, William of Government and parliament are situated in The Hague. Now that the Queen has also chosen this city as her residence, it is the seat of government in truly majestic style.

Earth, air, fire and water, these are the four natural elements. From these elements, earth and water have, in the Netherlands, formed an incomparable harmony. And they are Holland has a long past and an exciting future — the struggle of the Dutch against the surrounding water has been well-documented. and the country grows in size as the Dutch perfect their technique for reclaiming land out of the sea.

prohably even better known for our ahility to tame the water than for Remhrandt's 'Nightwatch' or the unique Dutch hulh flowers.

It was in 1150 that the first polder was reclaimed, hymeans of dykes enclosing an area of sea, and the Netherlands has been getting bigger ever since.
About 20% of the land surface is reclaimed and consequently lies below sea level. The expertise and insight, which come from centuries of experience, have culminated in the gigantic lisselmeer polders, (the former Zuyder Zee) in the world famous Afsluitdijk (enclosing dike) and in the impressive Delta works in the province of Zeeland.

Monumental places of interest

'One of the nicest things about all these efforts is that you can actually go and see the results. From the restaurant on the 30 kilometre long Afsluitdijk you can see the magnitude of this project - when you can no longer see any land hut just the dyke itself, which cuts a straight line through the water.

Walking, cycling or driving past the 18 fully intact wind-mills of Kinderdijk, south of Rotterdam, will make you realise how in earlier days the water had to be drained using the power of the wind.

Today you see a beautiful landscape, where the peace of nature and the calm movement of the windmills' sails might well lead you to beleive that the twentieth century has not even begun.

But it is the knowledge that these structures have played such a vital role in our community that gives this great collection of windmills their distinguished character. The windmills were superceded a long time ago. The 'Neeltje Jans' barrier in the province of Zeeland is a working example of the modern technology and unrestrained energy that the Netherlands spends nowadays on the protection of its coastline.

Tradition is the basis of folklore, and the Dutch way of life is especially rich in tradition. Everything from herring eating at the market to barrel organs which wind their way through the streets playing their cheer-ful music; from the sometimes subdued, sometimes vivid costumes to the many old crafts. which are still practised with enthusiasm.

The Dutch wooden shoe, for instance, is just as functional as it is traditional. In homes in the countryside, there is always a row of clogs to be found hy the back door not for decoration, hut for daily use!

And more and more folkloristic markets and festivals are organised throughout the country, where clog dancing and many other folk dances are performed; where old crafts can be seen too, like sheep shearing, cheese making or chair matting. And you can see clogs everywhere. Or, visit the cheese market in Alkmaar or the annual Crafts Festival in Limburg, where more then 70 traditional crafts are demonstrated.

Visit one of the many towns and villages along the Ijsselmeer on market day ... the water glistens in the sunlight, the aroma of coffee wafts over from the terraces. Edam, Volendam, Marken, Staphorst or Spakenburg — these are names known throughout the world. Holland is steeped in tradition - and we get more and more pleasure out of it. the folklore, tends to be rather contagious!

But tradition here is something more than costumes and folkloristic markets. It is also the centuries-old art of Delft Blue and Makkum pottery. The craftsmanship practised for generations in the Dutch pottery factories and workshops which people from all over the world come to see ... just to enjoy the combination of pleasant simplicity and indisputable quality.

Dutch culture is all over the world mentioned in the same hreath as the 17th century, our Golden Age. The Dutch painters and arists then reached a new vision of their subjects. whether it concerned a landscape, a still life, an interior or a

It was also at this time that the famous seascape works and town views were created. Yet even though the subjects were great, the Golden Age was for the Netherlands the area of tiny measurements. It was typical of the 'Hollandse School' that they wanted nothing to do with large measurements.

There is one glorious exception to the rule though, hy which they acquired their world fame: the group portraits of regent families and citizen soldiers. Remhrandt's Nightwatch is literally and figuratively one of the greatest paintings, that was brought out

Lasting wealth

And the Netherlands has enough museums to show it all: more than 500. They range from great and famous museums such as the Rijksmuseum or the Van Gogh Museum in Amsterdam to the unique open-air museum in Arnhem, the Zaanse Schans or the Zuiderzee Museum in Enkhuizen. A walk through the old town of, for instance, Amsterdam, Delft, Groningen or Gouda is a very special experience. Unbroken rows of 16th, 17th and 18th century facades adorn the canals and

A relatively unknown fact though, and so one of the surprising discoveries of the Netherlandsisthat there are an enormous number of heautiful country houses and castles that you can see in our country. From the Royal Palace of the Dam in the heart of Amster-Castle in Haarzuilens (in the province of Utrecht), a colossal neo-Gothic castle with a luxuriant park. These are just two examples. Many of the Dutch castles are laid out as museums or have a restaurant with a really excellent cuisine, so a visit includes that something extra to make it unforgettable.

The calm movement of a windmill's sails might lead one to believe that the 20th century has not begun, but the Netherlands is one of Europe's most prosperous nations.

Story of the black tulip

On 19th February 1986, the news agency Reuter released a short statement: 'A Dutch horticultural group claimed today that it has produced a flower which has eluded gardeners for centuries — the black tulip.' For those of us who view flowers as purely decorative, this snippet of news may well have passed us by unnoticed. But for the horticultural world - and Dutch horticulturists in particular — it was nothing short of a thunderbolt.

THE news of the black tulip hreakthrough was received with a mixture of cynicism and excitement. Erudite botanists snorted with contempt, dismissing it out of hand as a hiological impossibility. Across the North Sea, at the Royal Horticultural Society in London, reactions were much the same. 'Hmmm... interesting," one professor is reported to have said, 'hy the way, has anybody told you we're close to producing a red daffodil?' But the general public and those horticultural experts who had actually seen the tulip were less ready to criticise. And the press had a field day. In Holland the hlack tulip phenomenon hit the headlines of practically every national newspaper. In the USA and Japan, it got front page coverage. The Germans splashed the news across their tahloids, and in the United Kingdom, several lengtby editorials went to press including one under the inspired title In the world of flowers, it was like the first moonlanding. Meanwhile, back in the small Dutch town of Bovenkarspel, Mr Geert Hageman was arranging police protection for his priceless bulb, said to be insured on a level with Betty Grahle's legs.

Myth and magic

'It was the time when the Dutch ... had begun to worship that flower, and to make more of a cult of it than ever naturalists dared to make of the human race for fear of arousing the jealousy of God, wrote Alexandre Dumas in The Black

Tulip, a tale of romance and intrigue set in 17th century Holland. The curious Dutch ohsession with a perfect hlack bloom dates hack to the 16th century, and the cut-throat competition and astronomical prices of earlier ages have been the stuff of more than one cloak-and-dagger novel. It's been the holy grail of the gar-dener; the ultimate horticultural achievement. In Holland. the hlack tulip has become something of a national fairy tale. A legend that has taken over 300 years to find happy

The man responsible for hreaking the black tulip myth is Mr Geert Hageman, whose company Triflor B.V. operates under the auspices of the West Friesland Floral Institute. For the last 25 years, the institute has been carrying out extensive research work with dark tulips, attempting to eliminate the last intrusive strain of purple. At last, after years of crossing and re-crossing, the Queen of the Night and Viennese Waltz have obligingly reproduced an undoubtedly black bloom. It may not be very, very black,' says Hageman, 'but it's certainly black enough. Not jet black, or coal black. Just satisfyingly black.'

Making Horticultural history

Hageman estimates that his one frail bulb has cost something like £500,000 to produce and there's no guarantee that there will ever be another one. Tulips are fickle creatures: the Queen of the Night and Viennese Waltz could just as easily director, Mr Henk van Dam, it took the combined recourses of six horticultural concerns to hring the black tulip project to fruition. It's been a long, hard haul, but the result is certainly worth every ounce of time and effort. The hlack tulip will inevitably give the 200 billion dollar Dutch flower industry a major boost - if not in an immediate, financial sense. then certainly in international kudos. And Geert Hageman will also go down in horticultural history, however modestly he denies it. There was a team of ahout 17 people involved,' he says depreciatingly, 'I was just lucky it was me who hybridised the black tulip.

Livestock: a vital part of the Dutch economy

Picture Holland as it was painted by the Dutch masters — gentle, pastoral scenery, a windmill on the horizon, and cattle peacefully grazing in the meadows. Although today's landscape has been radically changed by modern architecture, road construction and industrial development, the cattle remain a constant feature. And a constant reminder of one of Holland's oldest and most respected industries — the livestock trade.

AS a result of the low level of much of the country - approximately 25 per cent of the Netherlands lies below sea level the pasture land is both rich and extensive. Giveo these natural resources, the growth of the Dutch livestock industry was a logical progression, rapidly forming a vital part of Holland's oational ecocomy.

The Netherlands is oow ooe of the largest producers of meat and meat products in the world, a positioo that has been partly attaioed by the fact that for many centuries agriculture has formed an essential element of Dutch life. However, although experience is an iovaluable asset, this success can also be attributed to the extraordinary Dutch ahility of making a virtue out of necessity. Despite the rich quality of the pasture land. a relatively limited amount of space is available: a factor which has historically provoked a high degree of iogeouity and progressive thought.

In addition, there is a fisherman's hut, a Hindeloopeo room, bakers' ovens, regional costumes, various modes of transport that have fallen out of use and a traditional herb garden.

From shrines to smithies

During the Second World War, the museum suffered heavily in the hostilities, and several huildings and artifacts were lost, including the eotire costume collection. After the war, the huildings and parkland were lovingly restored and in the intervening years, the collection has been greatly expanded. Farmhouses from Overijssel, North and South Holland, Drenthe, Gelderland. North Brabant, Friesland and Groningen now display their old-world charms alongside such exhibits as a polder drainage mill, a day labourer's cottage, archery hutts, a wayside shrine, a toll-house, a village school, a smithy and a farmhouse-cum-inn. A natioowide women's committee undertook the collection of a second display of regional costumes and since 1955 these have been on show in an exhibition area adjoining the administration wing. The first costume exhibition was entitled 'Netherlands in Wedding Finery', and in that year alone there were over 250,000 visitors to the museum complex.

A serious fire early in 1970 destroyed part of the 'Zaan district,' the cohhler's house, a tobacconist's shop and a corner house from Krommenie being lost. The first two of these buildings proved impossible to replace and so a formal garden was laid out, complete with a coach-house and the coachman's living accommodation.

Day to day history
The aim of the Netherlands Open Air Museum is to give an objective view of the daily life of the Dutch people in days gooe hy. Their lives, their homes and their work are obviously intrinsic to this and as a result, a wide variety of original dwelling houses, farmhouses, mills and workshops have been reconstructed in the museum park. As far as possible these have been placed in the appropriate settings and equipped with the relevant furniture utensils and tools. All in all, over 75 huildings have been brought and rebuilt within the museum grounds in the years since its foundation. The collection was originally intended to emphasise the life and work of country folk; farmers, shepherds, fishermen and craftsmen. Nowadays, however, the con-cept of folk-life is interpreted much more widely and the museum devotes considerable attention to town dwellers and working men. lodustry and technology have also been included, coming under the heading of industrial

A walk through the park, with its buildings, exhibitions demonstrations, is undoubtedly a pleasurable experience. You can take a look into the kitchens, barns and stalls of dozens of farmhouses, from the primitive Twente 'los hoes' to the richly appointed Frisian head, neck and body farmhouses. You can see how the traditional papermaker produces his wares in the paper mill, how the baker bakes rolls in his oven fired with hundles of faggots and how the miller uses the wind to set his corn mill turning. You can wander around the herb garden or take a rest on the terrace of the museum's own restaurant. In short, you can - in the most aggreable way possible — renve the many facets of the daily life of Holland's forefath-

Every animal destined to be slaughtered is registered from the time of hirth and after slaughtering, immediate cootrol and inspection takes place under the supervision of a veterinariao. Each carcass is individually iospected by an RVV official and only after approval has been granted is it deemed fit to be issued with an EEC stamp.

The use of hormonal growth stimulating additives is strictly prohihited, with the General Inspection Service of the Ministr; of Agriculture and the Meat Inspection Services exercising tight cootrol in this sphere.

In addition, the use of antihiotics is monitored during the slaughteriog process. Although the residues of agricul-tural insecticides can be traced in minute quantities in Dutch meat, these amounts are far helow the internationally accepted tolerance levels. This, again, is the result of the careful scrutioy to which livestock is subjected during all phases of production.

lo addition to the RVV inspections, a sensor inspection of meat and canned meat products is also carried out hy the Meat Products Quality Control Bureau. In accordance with the Quality Control.
Regulations on the Export of Meat Products (1958), products for export must meet pre-ordained standards with regard to composition, keeping qualities, packaging, labelling, description, etc. Testing that products comply with these specifications is performed by chemical, bacteriological and visual/sensor inspections at the

If the product does not make the grade, it is tested again at a subsequent inspection. If it is still not up to standard, then it is rejected for export purposes.

The collective meat production and processing industries have made the Netherlands the largest meat exporting nations in Europe, and such specialities as tender white veal, pre-sale (pre-salted) lamh from Texel, and the economical production of pork and beef have all contributed to this leading posi-

As a result, the export value of the livestock sector makes up a significant share of the country's total balance of trade. Thanks to a strong international demand for Dutch products and the flexibility of . the Dutch exporters, a very large part of Dutch meat production is sold ahroad. More than 90 per cent of the veal produced in the Netherlands is exported, more than 50 per cent of the beef, over 60 per cent of the pork and 70 per ceot of the lamb.

Because of this large dependency upon export, the Dutch meat industry has been forced to take the highest precautions possible in the fields of health care and quality control. Working within a watertight framework of laws, inspection procedures and rescarch activities, Dutch meat products meet all the existing international specifications currently in force.

The fierce competition and the sophisticated tastes of today's consumers have produced a demand for extremely high quality and an elaborate choice of products and all at reasonable prices. Through such organisations as the Meat Marketing Board, the Dutch have achieved these demanding criteria, with the result that Dutch meat products continue to remain a favourite with consumers throughout the world.

IT is easy to make the mistake of thinking that The Hague is the capital of the Netherlands: it is the seat of government, host to over 60 foreign embassics and home of the International Court of Justice. Queeo Beatrix chose to live in The Hague following her inauguration, and she receives amhassadors and visiting heads of state in the mangnificeot Noordeinde palace. There is indeed a certain majesty about The Hague and it has even been called the 'aristorcrat' of Dutch cities. Wide. tree-lined avenues, spacious boulevards and parks all contribute to a royal grandeur.

There is a timeless quality about the way the elegant buildiogs around the Binoenhof are reflected in the broad stretches of the 'Hofvijver.' Right in the heart of this historic group of huildings is the Ridderzaal (Knights Hall), datiog from the 13th century and distinguished hy its tapestried furnishings and stained glass windows.

Nearby is the Mauritishuis museum, where the finest of Remhrandt's self-portraits can be seen, io addition to many other masterpieces.

The Hague invites discovery with its charming little oriental shops, pedestrian precincts crowded with boutiques, and theantique market at the Lange Voorhout. It is a vital, cosmopolitan city with some of the most interesting attractions in

Ideal gateway to European markets

THE Netherlands, situated at the gateway to Europe, is ideal for penetrating markets within the Common market (EEC) as well as throughout Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

This is demonstrated by the fact that more than 3,500 foreign companies have established an operation here. Of these foreign companies in the Netherlands, 1,100 are American; 800 German; 650, British; 200, Swedish; 160, Japanese; 150, French; 110 Swiss; and 330 are from other countries.

The Netherlands, which is 115 km (72 miles) from east to west and 290 km (180 miles) from north to south is slightly larger than the state of Maryland in the United States or the island of Kyushu in Japan.

With a population of 14.6 million in an area encompassing 41,500 sq.km (16,000 sq. miles), the Netherlands has the distinction of being the most densely populated country in Europe. Amsterdam, the largest city and capital, is the financial and cultural centre. The Hague is the seat of government, and Rotterdam is home to the world's largest port.

Such commercial and industrial centres like London, Paris, Brussels, Frankfurt and Hamhurg, in addition to the Ruhr Valley, are within a day's surface travel from Amsterdam. In all, approximately 160 million people live within a radius of 500 km (310 miles) of Amsterdam, which makes this area almost three times as densely populated as the metropolitan areas of Tokyo or New York.

In order for a business to be successful, it must meet the needs of its customers. The Netherlands as a country knows this very well, and over the years the Dutch have learned to meet the needs of international husiness that wants to begin or expand an operation in the Netherlands. Known for centuries as a nation of traders, the Dutch naturally think internationally. They realise what it means to solve problems, to remain flexihle, to respond quickly to a changing market and to work closely with international husinesses hy offering, for example, a computerised logistics network, financial arrangements and investment incentives. The Dutch government

Rail: The Dutch railway system is fully integrated in the European rail network, which has standardised rail gauge and permitted railcar profile (with only very few exceptions, mainly in Eastern European countries). Rail through-transport is thus possible all around Europe and to the Middle East and even through the Soviet.

Inland Waterways: The major artery is the Rhine river system with canals connecting to Belgium, the industrialised north and sontheast of Germany, and the northeast of France.

The Rhine can be navigated from Basel in Switzerland to its ocean connection near Rotterdam, a distance of 1000 km (600 miles). By comparison, within the Netherlands itself there are close to 5000 kms (3000 miles) of navigable waterways.

of navigable waterways.

Parts: The Netherlands has many seaports, ranging from the large multipurpose ports of Rotterdam and Amsterdam to more specialised ports such as Vlissingen, Terneuzen, and Delfzijl. The ports provide supply and repair services as well as full range of cargo-handling facilities. Roterdam has grown to be the husiest port in the world by offering a diversity of services to conventional (break-hulk) shippers, unitised cargo handlers, and for container vessels, dry hulk cargo carriers, and tankers.

Airports: With one big allpurpose airport, Schiphol near Amsterdam, and a number of mainly regional airports such as Beek at Maastricht and Zestienhoven at Rotterdam, the Netherlands is well equipped to handle the distribution of air cargo to and from Europe, most often in combination with connecting trucking and express delivery services.

Schiphol Airport has become a major international supplying distribution staging-point specialised services on a freeport hasis. Cargo handling and administration are highly computer-ised. More than 60 foreign companies have established themselves either in their own private bonded warehouses or in one of the central freeport huildings. Much of the airport's warehouse activity is concerned with the Europeanwide distribution of spare parts and electronic products.

tion and transport capabilities, Schiphol serves a region far heyond the Netherlands's national boundaries.

Telecommunications: Modern telecommunication is indispensable to present-day export. The Netherlands is in the forefront of modern technology, with excellent products and services offered by the Dutch PTT. The country has been a pioneer in telecommunications, with one of the world's first fully-automated, direct dial telephone systems, mobile telecommunication, highspeed telex, facsimile and data communication services. The PTT is actively stimulating, coordinating and guiding developments such as teleports and an Integrated Services Digital Network (ISDN). which will provide a standard interface to allow integrated international telecommunications services to users of hoth public and private networks.

Recently, regional digital agglomeration network have been established with the installation of large-scale fibre optics systems in Amsterdam.

As the Netherlands is a member of the EEC, the regulations of the EEC are followed with regard to trade treaties. preferences, import regulations, customs duties, import quotas, rules of origin, etc. Unlike other EEC members, however, the Netherlands uses all possibilities available under the EEC rules to the fullest extent in order to facilitate trade. An attractive benefit in the Netherlands, which no other European country offers, is that a company official can discuss his organisation's particular tax situation with a Dutch tax inspector before the company begins operating in the country. As a result, the official will have a very accurate idea of his company's tax arrangement prior to the first transaction.

Unlike other countries that designate certain areas, such as ports or airports, as "free zones" the Netherlands allows businesses to establish a bonded warehouse anywhere in the country. Provided the husiness complies with certain pres-cribed guidelines, activities can be carried out 24 hours a day, 7 days per week, without any physical customs control. In addition, goods in bond can be stored, transferred, repacked, and re-exported. Goods may even undergo handling such as marking, examining, testing, repairing and being considered.

For many foreign companies the Netherlands proves to be an efficient entrance to the European market. During the past decades over more than 3,500 companies from many different countries have established an operation in the Dutch Delta. In several cases the foreign plants and offices in the Netherlands function as a base for European activities.

Dutch flower power

Say 'Holland' and somebody will inevitably came back with 'tulip', for the two have become irrevocably linked in popular mythology. Today the Dutch and tulips have a largely commercial relationship, with some 5,000 tulip growers and 700 bulb exporters virtually monopolising the world market. But things were once very different. In the 1630s, a curious obsession with tulips swept across Holland, sending the into Dutch uncharacteristic frenzy of crime and speculation.

FEW know that the start of the highly lucrative Dutch tulip industry dates back to a handful of 'onions with a peculiar taste' which arrived in Holland at the end of the 16th century from the mountains of Central Asia.

The name itself is said to be a, derivation of the Turkish word 'dulhan' — the colourful head-dress once worn at the courts of the sultans during the heyday of the mighty Ottoman empire. The Austrian diplomat, Ogier Ghishain de Busbecq, who travelled widely in Turkey, witnessed the high esteem in which the Turkish rulers held their 'tulipam' (as he spelled it).

He also remarked upon how the woman of the royal harem gathered every year in a tulipfilled courtyard to await selection hy the sultan. In the same period, the Dutch scholar Carolus Clusius (1526-1609) was serving at the court of Emperor Maximilian II in Vienna, and it seems that Busbecq hrought him a selection of tulip hulbs and seeds from Turkey, which Clusius then took back to the University of Leiden on his return home.

According to tradition, Clusius refused to part with any of his precious hulbs except for scientific purposes, and this so aroused the curiosity of his countrymen that in the dead of night envious gardeners took to hreaking into the University's Botanical Gardens to steal samples of the mysterious plant. Within a few years, tulips had spread beyond Leiden's city walls, and in no time at all the flower was flourishing throughout Holland.

Crazy about tulips

To say that tulips 'caught on' in Holland is an under-statement. The Dutch went quite literally, wild about them.

Everybody, rich and poor

Today's tulips are the descendants of the less flamboyant ones of alike, wanted to own them, and this demand created a cutthroat market which ultimately led many to ruin — and some to immense fortune.

Wealthy amateur growers eagerly paid exorbitant prices for unusual specimens, and from 1634 to 1637 tulip speculation reached the ridiculous, bringing the country to the brink of financial ruin. Auctions involving corrupt middlemen sprang up in practically every town and village in Holland, and during almost two full growing cycles (or more than four years), the Dutch nation neglected its soher husiness habits and embarked on what can only be described as tulip orgy.

Bulbs were traded at stock exchanges and new laws had to be passed to deal with the ensuing wave of crime. Stealing from gardens and raiding plots were only the tip of the iceberg: hlackmail, extortion and even murder were not unusual.

Then, in 1637, the buhhle hurst. Prices dropped, panic spread and the aftermath of tulipomania was an economic crisis on a scale never before encountered in the Netherlands.

Diseased tulips
But to understand this fascinating period of Dutch history, a hasic lesson in tulip botany is necessary. Tulips produced by seed will not usually flower for four to five years, although tulips that are reproduced by new hulbs will flower the following spring, bearing a bloom identical to the mother plant.

Occasionally, however—and this was the heart of tulipomania— a process known as 'breaking' occurs. The early Dutch growers soon discovered that a hulh could suddenly and inexplicable produce a new hloom of different colours and bizarre patterns. These 'hroken' offspring became collectors' items — one hulh of a tulip known as Semper Augustus was actually sold for the equivalent of $4,600.

In a commodities market gone herserk, speculators bought and sold hulbs that had never even left the ground: husinesses, homes, jewels, even a workman's tools, were mortgaged or sold to huy hulbs. And some fortunes were indeed made - until the fateful day when there were more sellers than huyers and the market crashed. The government stepped in to stop further speculation and to restore much needed law and order, leaving the tulip trade in the hands of serious growers and gardeners.

Three centuries later, it is sad to think that tulipomania was in fact caused hy a viral disease which changes the chromosome composition in the flower cells. This virus is carried by aphids and can spread quickly through a field if carried by aphids and can spread quickly through a field if the sick plants are not removed and destroyed. After several years, the diseased tulips eventually weaken and die. Today tulips are the descendants of the less flamboyant but healther plants that were preserved and propagated by serious gardeners, either unable to afford, or uninterested in, the more spectacular varieties.

One of the oldest tulips still produced in any great quantity, the Keizerskroon (King's crown), dates from 1750. The five hundred commercially grown cultivated species, or cultivars, now on the market are chiefly the result of hydridization in this century—the wild mutations that were produced in the days of tulipomania have long since faded into oblivion.

No reason for oil exporters to reduce their quota any further, says Sheikh Ali

Opec ministers fail to reach agreement on cuts

VIENNA, Austria, April 29, (AP): Opec oil ministers failed in an initial round of talks yesterday to reach agreement on proposed oil-export cuts organisation, leaders said.

After a nearly four-hour session that ended early today, the 13 ministers said they would resume their closed-door deliberations this evening.

Rilwanu Lukman, the Nigerian president of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said the ministers had discussed the export-cuttingplan "in general terms, but nothing specific was decided.

Earlier this week, after meeting a six-nation Opec panel, six non-Opec producers said they were willing to cut exports hy five per cent if the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries reciprocated.

Conference sources said the Opec countries were divided on their reaction.

The smaller producers were generally in favour of Opec offer-

But others thought five per cent of Opec's total output of around 18 million barrels a day would be too much. They feared this would send prices surging, causing the kind of over-production which eventually led to a price crash from over 30 to under $9 a barrel between late 1985 and Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest exporter, has shown reluctance to make any cuts in its output and King Fahd said in a newspaper interview yesterday that Opec should merely honour its individual production quotas while the non-Opec states made actual cutbacks.

More are employed in Soviet consumer sector

MOSCOW, April 29, (Reuter): Soviet economic reforms have brought a marked increase in numbers employed in cooperatives running enterprises from restaurants to beauty salons, official figures showed on Monday. A report on the economy in the government newspaper lzvestia said the number of people working in cooperatives had shot up from 15,000 in the first quarter of 1987 to 200,000 now. A total of 400,000 were now employed in "individual labour activities," or limited private enterprise ventures allowed by Kremlin reforms, although the report did not say if that total included those employed by cooperatives. The figures also showed that industrial output in the first three mouths of 1988 grew by five per cent compared with the first quarter of last year, nr 0.5 per cent more than planned.

But output of many consumer goods and basic foodstuffs was below target, Izvestia said. Demand for clothing, shoes, potatoes, meat and dairy products was not met. Izvestia said 400,000 workers had transferred from jobs in industry, construction and transport to other branches of the economy, especially the service area. But some ministries were not giving enough help to those employed in the new enterprises and cooperatives, falling to supply them with the materials they need. "A lot of officials were indequately prepared for the new conditions," it said. The report also said that, in the important machine-building sector, a priority in Kremlin plans for economic renewal, 33 per cent of enterprises failed in meet targets, at a cost of 286 million roubles ($484 million) in undelivered products.

Carter favours gasoline tax

NEW YORK, April 29, (Reuter): Former President Jimmy Carter said oo Wednesday he favours increased taxation of petrol to ensure the United States becomes less dependent ou Opec countries for its nil supply. Interviewed nu the nightly business report, a public television news show, Carter said more and more oil was being imported and less and less was being produced in the United States. "We must take steps to ensure that we are not so dependent on Opec so that, if prices again skyrocket, our economy would be devastaled and there would be worldwide inflation," be said.

Carter agreed that an nil import tax was one possible step to take. "Another is to have an increased tax on gasoline (petrol)." be said. "We'll have to have some increase in revenues ... and this would be a discouragement on the part of Americans to waste so much energy." As far the coming US election, Carter said it was too early to choose between the two Democratic candidates, Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson. However, be believed either one would do a better job than Vice President George Bush.

"He (Bush) has basically promised to coutinue Reaganomics ... which he had formerly called 'voodoo economics,' Carter said. Something has to be done to cut down on the enormous (budget) deficit we have been experiencing and something has to be done to change our adverse trade balance."

GATT ends China readmission talks

GENEVA, April 29, (Renter): The world trade body GATT on Thursday concluded a special three-day meeting on China's application for readmission to the 96-nation group and will hold further talks on the subject in June, delegates said. China was a founding member of the GATT in 1948, hot quit two years later after the present Communist administration ousted the nationalists from power. Peking applied in July 1986 to 'resume its seat' as a developing country member.

Another session of the China working party of the General Agreement on Tariffs and trade (GATT) was scheduled for June. Shen Jueren, vice-minister of Foreign Economic Relations, led a 30-strong delegation bere from Beijing which answered 300 questions on China's economic and trade policies. A Chinese official at the closed-door talks told Reuters: "China's delegation presented a lot of material which will be hard to digest. It was almost a one-sided session with our description of our own trade system and whole economic system. "Only after collecting this information can the other GATT member states think about policy decisions," he added. Delegates reported the private discussions this week were highly technical, covering China's tariffs and internal taxes. They said there were no policy

Court turns down appeal against tin council

LONDON, April 29, (AP): The court of appeal on Wednesday turned down appeals by 17 creditors to force the Inter-national Tin Council to repay an estimated £500 million ($935 million) of debts incurred when the body collapsed in 1985.

The judgement was the latest stage in a long batfle by the council's creditors to prove that the 22 member states of the council M which include the major tin producers, most of the European Economic Community and Japan - are liable for the council's debts.

The council collapsed in October 1985 after running up huge debts in its attempts to sup-port the tin price despite expand-ing production and falling

Contract

The consequences of the council's demise are still hanging over the metals markets, with the London Metal Exchange's tin contract still suspended indefinitely. Sharply lower tin prices have put many producers out of business

The six banks making claims against the council include the Kleinwort Benson Lonsdale Plc and Hambros Plc Eleven Metals Brokers, all members of the London Metal Exchange, were led in their court filing by J.H. Raynes

Dismissing the creditors' five appeals, which all centered on the precise legal status of the council, the court upheld the decisions of two lower court jud-ges that the council has a distinct legal personality, separate from its members, and is alone responsible for its dehts.

However, in an unusual move, Lord Justice Michael Kerr, one of three presiding judges, said in the judgement that the council's resistance to all attempts by its creditors to regain their losses was "unbecoming to an international organisation, to those who constitute it, to those who are responsible for its actions and to those who advise it."

Debt crisis far from solved: Japanese banker

ZURICH PS

LONDON, April 29, (Reuter): A leading Japanese banker said yesterday the Third World deht crisis, far from easing, might be about to come in a head.

Yusuke Kashiwagi, chairman of the Bank of Tokyo, called for an urgent initiative hy industrial nations to help channel new money from private hanks to the Third World.

Economic collapse in dehtnr countries, he said, would have tremendous political and social consequences that will be felt around the world."

Kashiwagi devoted a speech given to husiness and media leaders at the annual luncheon of Reuters Holdings Plc, the news and financial information group, to the deht issue.

"Time is precious and running out," he said. "It appears to me that this issue will probably be coming to a critical head in the caming manths unless something is done about it soon."

Measures

Kashiwagi said new measures hy major governments and international institutions like the World Bank and International Monetary Fund could he initiated at a summit in Toronto in June of the seven leading noo-Communist industrial nations.

The way out would be for ioternational institutions to borrow from private banks and re-lend to the Third World, or, which would be better, take over much of the risk undertaken by the private sector when it lends to the Third World, he said.

Leaders of the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, Britain and Canada will meet in Toronto.

"The seven governments meeting at the summit are the major stockholders afthe Warld Bank and their banks also hold most of the outstanding deht owed hy the highly indehted middle incume countries," Kashiwagi said.

He said that, despite five years of dehate, no consensus on solving the problem of more than $1,000 hillion owed by the Third World had been reached.

Deht relief, he said, or cancelling deht unilaterally "is tan-tamount to suicide," because Third World nations would be rohbed of future access to the money markets. It was easy to criticise leaders and borrowers - "doubtless lenders should be blamed for overloaning in their greediness to do business, and horrowers were guilty of having overhorrowed in their eagerness to grow faster."

But the debt crisis had global implications and could no longer be left to them to take care of alone.

So, "the role of international financial institutions, the World Bank, the IMF and others, as well as the governments of creditor countries, becomes, I believe, more and more impor-

Soviet Union tries to boost oil output

MOSCOW, April 29, (Reuter): The Saviet Union would not feel bound hy any agreement between Opec and non-Opec producers to cut oil exports, a spokesman for the Ministry of the Petroleum Industry said yesterday.

Spokesman Valery Vorohyov told Reuters the Soviet Union wants to continue increasing its oil nutput, ant reducing it. He was reacting to events in Vienna, where Opec oil ministers are meeting to consider how to respond to an offer by seven producers from outside the organisation to boost nil prices through joint export cuts. "If there is an agreement to reduce nutput, the Soviet Union is not ubliged to do so," Vorohyov said in a telephone interview.

"We are not a member of Opec, and we are not at the meet-ing in Vienna," he said.

Plans

"According to our plans, which are well known, we are trying to increase our output of oil, and that's what we are doing," he

Reagan seeks new trade bill

WASHINGTON, April 29, (Reuter): The White House told Congress yesterday it wants a new trade bill to replace one passed hy lawmakers that President Reagan will veto because he disagrees with some provisions.

But Democratic leaders in the Senate, which approved the giant bill by a 63-36 vote on Wednesday, said Reagan "should know better" than to expect quick action uu alternative wheu it took three years for Congress to pass a trade hill.

"There can't be any quick tur-naround nn this hill," Senate majority leader Robert Byrd said. He said there was too little time to pass a new hill this year because amendments would be offered if Congress tries to strip out pravisions the Reagan administration does nn1 want.

Guilty "The White Hnuse doesn't want a trade hill," Byrd charged. The hill would force the president to retaliate against a country found guilty of 'numernus and pervasive' unfair trade barriers against US competitors. The type of punishmeni would be chusen hy the president. The Reagan administration supports many provisions in the 1,100-page trade bill, hut singled out one requiring advance notice of major plant closings and layoffs as a reason for vetoing the whole bill

Though Byrd clung to a faint hope that Reagan might change his mind and sign the bill into law, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he would

Legisiation

"The president will veto the bill," Fitzwater told reporters, adding Reagan wants a trade bill and would work with Cnngress to thrash out legislation "acceptable to us.

"We want to get another trade bill passed," be said. "We would like to turn around this veto as sonn as pussible."

The Senate vnte fell short nf the two-thirds majority — 67 nut of 100 members — that would be needed to overturn a presidential vetn and was far closer than the commanding 312-107 approving vote in the House a week earlier.

The trade hill will likely go to the White House about the middle nf next week after which the president has 10 days to veto it nr sign it into law.

With elections coming, the leading enttender for the Democratic presidential nomination, Michael Dukakis, said in a letter to the president it was "a sensible, carefully crafted bill and will enhance our competitiveness ... without erecting artificial trade barriers that could harm American workers and threaten a trade war."

US trade partners in Europe and Asia denounced the trade proposals approved by Congress and vowed to resist if they became law. The massive trade bill that Congress wants to force through over President Reagan's vetn contains the following key prov-

Retaliation — The Reagan administration, under the US trade representative, would be forced to investigate countries with "numerous and pervasive" unfair trade barriers against US competiturs. The type of retalia-tion would be decided by the president.

Sanctinns -- Three-year sanctions would be imposed against Japan's Toshiba Corp and Kongsberg Vaapenfabrikk of Norway for selling high technology the Pentagnn claims helped the Soviet Uninn huild better submarines. The ban applies to sales to the US government. Toshiba Machine Co would be furhidden to sell any goods in the United States for three years.

Foreign hribes - Would ease the foreign corrupt practices act by limiting criminal and civil liability of corporate officials to those who "know" a third party has made illegal payments to individuals to conduct husiness in a foreign country. Currently an official may be prosecuted if they know or have "reason to Small husiness — Increases the operation of the small business administration's international trade office and authorises $3.5 million this fiscal year to help small firms promote their products in fireign markets. Plant closing — This provisinn stands at the centre of the clash between the White House and Congress, even though it has unthing to do with foreign trade. The section would force large US firms to give 60 days' notice before closing a large plant or laying nff a large number of Windfall profits tax --Repeals a 1980 law taxing the profits of US oil producers when the amount charged rises above a set base price. The tax currently is slated to be phased out hy 1993.

Agriculture — In the event world farm trade talks bogged down, the president would have the authority to expand an export subsidy programme or implement a new programme so that US farmers could sell wheat, corn and soyheans at dramatically lower prices.

Worker retraining — Authorises $980 million for the retraining of workers who lose their jobs because of plant closings or new technology.

· Negotiating authority — The president would be given authnrity to conduct multilateral trade negntiations under the 'Uruguay round" nf world trade talks now being conducted hy memhers of the General Agreement nn Tariffs and Trade

Copyrights and patents — The president would be forced to take actinn against countries that do nnt hnnnur US copyrights and palenis, hul enuld eite US national security fir withholding a response. Generally, the hill also would make it easier for a US patent halder ta recover damages resulting from foreign use of their patent.

Advantages

Analysts note that compact discs offer several advantages over other recording media, including higger capacity and a much sharper quality of reproduction.

More important, said Tandy chairman John Roach, a Thor-CD recorder could cost as little as $500 in the US market. That compares with more than a $1,000 for Digital Audin Tape (Dat) players, the major rival of conventional CDs.

UAE, Moscow hold talks on oil technology cooperation

ABU DHABI, April 29, (Opecna): Closer cooperation in oil technology between the UAE and the Snviet Union were explored in talks between the two countries.

An interview in a local paper here quoted the Soviet ambassador to UAE, Feliks Fedotov, as saying that an agreement was alsn heing worked out to facilitate the sale of UAE oil and gas products to Soviet Union's neighbouring states. Proposals

The paper, 'Khaleej Times' said the agreements being finalised contained proposals to introduce a new marketing system for the sale of oil and petroleum products for the benefit of hoth states.

Referring to the Soviet support for Opec in its endeavour tn restore world oil market stability, he said detailed talks were being planned between the Soviet Uninn and Opec member states Saudi Arahia and Kuwait. The amhassador said he expected oil and gas prices to shoot up at the end of this century as there was no viable alternative to oil.

Sterling strengthens

Dollar mixed and gold dips

LONDON, April 29, (AP): The US dollar turned in a mixed performance in Europe early today as traders awaited release of economic data from the United Gold prices dipped below $450

a troy ounce. The dollar drifted within a narrow range in the first hours of European trading.

Late month commercial dealings kept the market moderately active. But many players staying to the sidelines prior to the release later today of the US index of leading econ-omic indicators for March.

In London, the pound sterling jumped today, resuming a recent rally on news of better-thanexpected British trade figures for The pound climbed close to

3.15 West German marks, up from 3.1282 at Thursday's close, before easing. It touched 1.8865

Currency dealers said the Bank of England, Britain's central bank, intervened in the open market and sold pounds to brake the rise -- concerned that if sterling goes too high it will crimp exports and widen the trade gap

Today's figures showed that the visible trade deficit narrowed to £854 million ($1.6 billion) in March, after being £1.32 hillion ($2.47 hillinn) in Fehruary.

Shares also rallied nn the London Stock Exchange, hui snme nervnus investors later tonk profits. Initial positive reaction was tempered by concern at haw a stronger pound might pinch exporters' dollar earnings.
At London's midday, 30 minutes after the trade figures were announced, the FTSE index of 100 hlue chip British stocks was at 1,807 points, up just 2.6 on Thursday's close.

Eased

By midday, the pound had eased to around 3.14 marks and $1.8875, up about one pfennig and one cent on the day.

The pound has found favour with international investors in recent weeks hecause of relatively high British interest rates and a booming domestic economy.

The government in early March apparently abandoned an effort to hold it below three marks.

The dollar was not affected hy today's sterling gyrations and traded quietly in London at midsession worth around 1.6680 marks and 1.124.60 yen.

Millwall seek place in First Division

LONDON. April 29. (Reuter): The London docklands, where million-dollar riverside apartments have replaced redundant cranes and decaying warehouses. could soon be reverberating to the noise of First Division soccer fans.

While the young professional. or yuppie, newcomers to Lon-don's East End may dread the thought of visits from Chelsea. Arsenal and West Ham United fans, Millwall Foothall Club have gone decidedly upwardly mohile.

Millwall, who will be seeking to consolidate their place at the top of division two when they meet visiting Stoke City lomorrow, were formed in 1885 and remain the only London club never to have played in the First Division.

But like the surrounding neighbourhood, Millwall are trying to throw off their tough image and there has been talk of a new super-stadium to replace their present headquarters in the qaintly-named cold hlow lane.

Though their die-hard supporters would turn pale at the notion, the club may also seek more up-market name for any new stadium.

Closed Nicknamed The Lions, Millwall quite properly play at the Den, which has been closed on occasions by the football authorities hecause of the quite improper behaviour of the club's following, traditionally drawn from the nearby docks.

Two points clear of second-placed Aston Villa with a game in hand. Millwall are confident they can attain First Division status and greatly increase their attendances next season.

They have two of the hrightest attractions in English football at present in twin-strikers Tony Cascarino and Teddy Sheringham -- 45 goals between them -and play a refreshingly attacking game.

Their long-term supporters are even now relishing the prospect of facing Liverpool in the Den, though how they will react if their favourite meat-pie stall is converted into a quiche parlour only time will tell.

At one stage earlier in the season, Aston Villa appeared near-certainties to regain their place in the ton floor floor. place in the top flight, but a run of disappointing home results have placed them in peril.

Villa have taken just 31 points from 21 home games compared to 45 points from the same num ber of away matches, allowing City, Blackhurn Rovers, Middlesbrough and Crystal Palacetoenter the frame. NYSTROM OVERCOMES BERGSTROM

Louganis and Joyner-Kersee honoured

WASHINGTON, April 29, (AP): Diver Greg Louganis was named the US Olympic Committee's 1987 Sportsman of the Year and track and field star Jackie Joyner-Kersee again was selected as the top sportswoman yesterday.

Joyner-Kersee became the first to win the women's award in successive years. Louganis also won previously, taking the award in 1982. They were chosen by a panel of the media, members of the Athletes' Advisory Council and USOC officers.

The awards were presented by Vice-President George Bush in a ceremony across from the White House honouring more than 50 athletes of the year from 43 Olympic sports, Board The presentations highlighted the first full day of meetings hy the USOC house of delegates and executive hoard.

During 1987, Louganis excelled at the US Olympic festival, the US Outdoor Championships and the Pan American Games.

Joyner-Kersee, the world record holder in the heptathlon and long jump, won 20 of 24 events last year, including two titles at the World Championships in Rome.

of his final three holes.
"I haven't played a round like this in a long time," said Floyd, the 1986 US Open champ. "I putted well and that's important because you aren't going to beat many people out here if you don't make the putts."

Norman had a near identical round with three consecutive hirdies of his own in the early going and hirdies on two of his three final holes.

By Gail Seery

WAEL KHOURY, formerly Clerk of the Court for the KTMSD rallies, told the Arah Times that he was 'deeply disappointed" at the lack of appreciauon shown hy memhers.

Khoury and his organising committee resigned after the last local rally, as the result of an incident in which a committee member was assaulted.

This, Khoury explains, was symptomatic of the problems he had encountered since he took office in January. "I feel I hate rallies as much as I liked them before. We worked hard to try to make things better, but there was no appreciation." He is convin-ced that any further effort will go to waste as although the ideas are there. the memhers seem opposed to change.

Khoury was a founding mem-ber of the club, having been a driver from 1978 until 81, when he left Kuwait to work in England for a year. When he came hack he assisted Faez Chihah in organising events, and had been contemplating a return to active participation as a driver. When the election for the new committee took place last November, he found himself voted in to his position hy the members. Professional

"When I accepted the posinon, I had it in mind to promote and improve rallies in Kuwaii and to make the organisation of the events more professional. I wanted it to be more than just a group of drivers going out and driving around the desert. I had a lot of ideas." During his travels, Khoury saw the Lombard RAC rally, and also some Gulf rallies, and these played a large part in shaping his amhitions for the Kuwait Cluo.

"I formed an organising committee, and tried to delegate the duties. The organising people were good, with clean minds and professional backgrounds." Khoury feels that not only did he strengthen safety measures taken before the event, introducing medical tests for the first time. but he also upgraded the level of competition. "The stages were chosen to provide a challenge for Wael Khnury at work driver, car and co-driver," he

The first rally of the season was a success, with a record number of entries, and a lot of marshalls, who were placed at strategic intervals throughout the course to ensure that no irregularities took place. It certainly looked as if Kuwait rallies were entering a more positive era.

The International rally hrought with it the first indications that nothing was going to change and that hard work brought no support either from rank and file members, or from senior committee members.

Publicity

"We had only a short time available to organise the event." recalls Khoury. The new committee took office at the start of the year, and in that hrief time had to prepare a rully to as high a standard as possible. Sadly, the actual rally is obscured by the two major controversies that his the organisers, the Fisa fiasco and the Toyota team's protesi. However, Khoury's memories dwell less on those difficult moments than on the sheer difficulty of doing so much work in so little time. The rallies are organised by a special committee, appointed by the Clerk of the Course, who in this case was elected in a ballot of members. However. that committee reports to the main committee of seven members. The organising committee has responsibility only for the technicalities of the rally, and requires hack-up from the main committee.

There was no backup, says Khoury flady. The chasing of publicity and sponsors should have been done by the main committee. "There was no support from some of the committee members. This had been noticed in the first rally and those members had promised to help out in the International. We had only a very short time to work, and there was certainly no time for blaming people."

The organising committee, and in particular Wael Khoury, Jack Luhhat and Abdulla Barkawi had to do everything themselves, even down to carrying the typewriters and equipment into the rally office.

Khoury took a week off work. and his wife left the country during the lead up to the event. "There were sleepless nights until the day of the rally. We even had to arrange flights and accommodation for the visitors. Perhaps it would not have been a problem if we had known we were not going to be helped when we started. But we expected that everyhody would work." Khoury makes it clear that these criticisms do not apply to every committee member, and nordoes he want any names mentioned. "There were people on the committee who are only interested in power and prestige or in their own driving and sconsorship. There was not enough support." Even so, the Fisa representative. Bruno Moretti from Italy told Khoury in a telephone conversation, that this year's International had, in fact, scored the highest points ever for a Kuwait Rally — even higher than last year's event. "After the international, we had a meeting and reviewed the previous two rallies, looking at where there were mistakes and at what we could do to ensure it would be better in future. We didn't give up because we felt we had done something worthwhile and wanted to improve the rallies, despite the lack of support from KTMSD,"

Attended

For the third round, on April 15, we had nice new stages, the best used in Kuwait, and a very good level of competition, with a good turnout of drivers, despite there being only a short gap between the two events. There was still no support from the main committee however, and it looked at first as if there would be no raily. Khour- had even planned to sponsor the event out of his own pocket, just to make sure that rathes continued in Kuwait.

"I was aware that there was a lot of bad feeling against the committee among the drivers and called a meeting, which was attended by all the main groups of drivers currently participating. I explained the problems and how they could help. Khoury had then been convinced that it was the wrong time to quit and that it was worth another try. Khoury had wanted to try and explain to the drivers how to promote rallies in Kuwait, "It was an opportunity for a gathering and exchange of ideas," and he felt it had worked.

It was only at the end of the rally that Khoury despaired. A protest against Facz Chihab had been brought. It was alleged that he had driven into Stage 9 with-out a windscreen. This matter was not decided by the organisers, and was correctly referred to the stewards of the event. They spoke to the start marshalls for the stage, who were adamant that Chihah's windscreen had been acceptable.

On being shown a photograph fithe damage to Chihah's car. Khoury was prepared to admit that the windscreen might not have been allowable, but stressed that this decision was within the jurisdiction of the stewards, and that he personally had no part in making the judgement. When Jack Luhhat posted the results he was assaulted. It was this that proved the last straw for Khoury, and after completing formalities for the rally he notified the club and the Arab Yimes of his decision to quit. However, in an attempt to bring calm to the situation, he declined to make a statement until tem-then became official, and the committee's subsequent decision to alter those results was, according to Khoury, outside their jurisdiction. The ASN (national sporting authority) should, perhaps have been brought in at this point. He is bitter about the lateness of the committee's response.

"Finally they worked," he remarked. "The drivers don't seem to be aware of the regulations, despite the fact that they're available in English and Arabic. 'After I saw the way the drivers appreciated the work I'd done, and the lack of support from the committee members. I saw that I had to resign. I can't see that I would ever be willing to reconsider my decision." As for the KTMSD, "they are in big trouble now. They should be working on future events, and especially on next year's international

"Over the years I've been involved with the cluh I have never seen an improvement. We need to look at it from scratch. Maybe this hasn't been the right way to do it. They need a rally director working full time, who has the authority to make decisions, and who is not biased hy being a driver himself. That would be better than a seven man committee holding one meeting a month, at which you are unlikely to see all seven members present at once.

The other alternative Khoury sees, is for the KT Club to allow other parties with the necessary organisation skills and power, to hold rallies in Kuwait. "They should do this for the good of rallies, and accept that the present set up is not working."

"I am very disappointed. My wife is also disappointed, as my family were prepared to make sacrifices because they thought I was doing something worthwhile. In the months we were working for rallies we have achieved a great deal, but it has

Pakistan forced to compromise: Intikhab

LONDON, April 29, (Reuter): Pakistan's cricket team were forced to compromise over an incident in which Abdul Oadir hit a spectator because they had no time to contest the issue, manager Intikhah Alam said on his arrival bere from the Caribbean yesterday.

The rumpus happened during the last day of the final Test against West Indies in Bridge town on Wednesday and resulted in Qadir facing an assault charge which was dropped when the parties settled out of court.

But Intikhah told Reuters in a telephone interview from his London hotel that his team's departure only a few hours after the Test was used to pressurise them into a compromise.
Intikhab said he paid the spectator, 22-year-old unemployed Albert Auguste, $1,000. "If we want to fight the case we would have had to stay for an extra Iwo weeks," said the Pakistani manager. Intikhah said he wanted to clarify the Pakistan team's point of view ahout the incident, 'which is regretted.'' He said in a statement: "Abdul

Qadir and other players were subjected to a barrage of invective, filthy ahuse and vulgar remarks by the spectator over the last few days. Summons

"His continued ahuse and derogatory remarks about Pakistan provoked Qadir into manhandling him.

"The spectator was able to get a summons hased on a medical report which claimed that he was hit on the hand. As we were told that proceedings would take two weeks and Qadir would have to stay back, we decided to compromise.

"We feel strongly that the timing of the departure of the team was used to pressurise and force us into the compromise because of expediency. We agreed on this course.

"I would like to draw a parallel with the Sylvester Clarke incident at Multan during the 1980-81 series when Clarke caused grevious hodily barm to a spectator.

"However, in the interests of the good relations and goodwill, the local administration and Pakistan's cricket board persuaded everyone concerned to settle the matter without the use of a summons.

Intikhah said that although West Indies cricket hoa officials were present at the Test on Wednesday, they did not intervene.

"I shall be reporting the incident to my cricket board wben I return to Pakistan,' added Intikhab.

BENJAMIN AND DUJON SNATCH WIN FOR CARIBBEAN SIDE

West Indies overcome Pakistan in thriller

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, April 29, (Reuter): Winston Benjamin, playing in only his fourth Test, and Jeff Dujon shared a ninth wicket stand of 61 that fired West Indies to a two-wicket win over Pakistan — and a share of the series - in the third and final cricket Test on Wednesday.

Benjamin, primarily a fastmedium bowler, struck an unbeaten 40 and wicketkeeper Dujon made 29 not out as West Indies, who needed 266 to win, recovered from 207 for eight and triumphed on a gripping fifth and last day.

The match-winning partnership between the newcomer and the more experienced Dujon took 67 minutes, sealing victory at 268 for eight shortly after lunch and ensuring West Indies maintained a 15-year unbeaten sequence in Test series in the Caribbean.

Helped The result set off joyous scenes of dancing and jumping among 4,000 spectators at Kensington Oval, where West Indies have not lost since 1934, and helped 10 erase the memory of a sour incident that marked the morning session. Pakistan leg-spinner Abdul Qadir, who was fielding at long leg, punched a spectator who heckled him. Play was held up briefly and resumed after tour manager Intikhah Alam came on to the field and Qadir was moved to another position.

Qadir was involved in the rumpus midway through the first session when, fielding on the boundary, he was heckled and jeered by a section of the crowd after looking upset at umpire David Archer's refusal to uphold his appeal against Dujon for a bat-

The spectator concerned in the incident, Albert Auguste, said he told Oadir "that he must howl something proper." Auguste said Qadir then came up and

Portuguese GP

JEREZ DE LA FRONTERA, Spain, April 29, (Reuter): Honda mechanics are working against the clock to fix world champion Wayne Gardner's brake problems in time for Sunday's 500cc Portuguese Motorcycle Grand Prix.

Gardner, still searching for his first win of the campaign, will need a perfect hike and a ride to match if he is to outpace the Yamahas of two-time world champion Eddie Lawson of the US and sensational Australian newcomer Kevin Magee.

PARIS, April 29, (Reuter): game and falling 8-3 behind in World champion Jansher Khan, back to winning ways after his sbock exit in the British Open two weeks ago, beat second-seed Chris Dittmar to win the final of the Paris Open Squash Cham-pionship on Wednesday. Only a few invited spectators in the tiny gallery of the historic club Jou de Paume were privileged to watch the clash, in which the Pakistani triumphed 9-1 10-9 3-9 9-4 in exactly 60 min-

The Australian started sluggishly and after losing the opening the second, shouted to himself: The reprimand seemed to work and be only narrowly lost the game by the odd point and

France to meet Greece

LONDON, April 29, (Reuter): Rising French star Eric Cantona shot down England's hopes of reaching their third European Under-21 soccer championship final as France beld the hosts 2-2 on Wednesday to win 6-4 on aggregate. Cantona, the striker who scored a superb solo goal in France's 4-2 first leg win a fortnight ago, added two more in an incident-packed second leg semifinal at Highbury, bome of Arsenal. In the final the French meet Greece who beat Netherlands 5-2 on aggregate.

Midfielder Paul Gascoigne had given England a flying start, firing bome from a Paul Davis pass after only four minutes. They were unlucky not to be 2-0 up at halftime when David Lowe, had a superb 20-metre effort disallowed after a linesman had flagged an England player offside. It was a harsh decision as the player could hardly have been interfering with play but it was to prove a costly one.
